AWFUL CRIME SHOCKS COUNTY

Negro Kills Paramour in Fit of Jealous Rage Early Saturday, Is Later Arrested.

About five o'clock Saturday morning Sam Jackson, colored, shot and instantly killed Mary Ella Williams, colored, at her home in this city. It appears Jackson had been threatening the Williams girl for some days prior to the killing and Saturday morning quietly entered her home through a rear door to which he carried a key and shot her twice in the breast while she slept. It is said either of the shots would have been fatal. Immediately following the shooting Jackson made his escape.

Acting on what proved to be a reliable piece of information from Bourbon county, Monday night, Sheriff Howell, (accompanied by Deputy Sheriff Montjoy, Robert Young, Henry Thomas and Robert Nelson, the latter driving the car), hurriedly went to Cane Ridge in Bourbon county where Jackson was arrested without resistance and safely delivered him to the jailer here.

A GOOD SELECTION

Hon. Robert H. Wim and Chas. D. Grubbs, a couple of good lawyers and two fine men from Mt. Sterling, came in Monday night to attend to some legal matters before Circuit Court. Mr. Wim was a Judge of the Court of Appeals and made a very fine reputation for the time he served, and, like Petroleum V. Nasby, who was postmaster at the Confederate Cross Roads, hopes to be again. Judge Wim likely has an ambition to get a full term in this same office, getting it next time by a commission from the people rather than by appointment from the Governor. It was a good selection.—Jackson Times.

WILL RETURN HOME

Mr. James C. French has resigned his position with the Winchester Drug Company at Winchester, Ky., and will return to this city to live.

Mrs. Prewitt's School.

Mrs. Prewitt wishes to announce that her school will begin the fall term on September 13th.

SAYS HE IS NOT GUILTY BUT READY TO DIE

In a letter to his wife, Wallace Smothers, who is to be electrocuted within a few days at Eddyville, told her that he had made his peace with God and that he believed that his sins had been forgiven. He said he was prepared to die but that he was not guilty of the crime for which he has to give his life.

He begged his wife to raise their two children right and teach them to go to church. Smothers was convicted of assaulting a little girl in Clark county a short time ago.

Mrs. Margaret Foster Acosta, of Lexington, was given a very cordial reception at The Tubb Theatre Friday and Saturday evenings, her singing eliciting a great deal of applause and favorable comment. PARIS FAIR THIS WEEK

The Bourbon County Fair will be held September 1st, 2nd and 3rd and a cordial invitation is extended to everybody to attend. The fair promises to be bigger and better than ever before.

COMING EVENTS, ETC

It was Marse Henry, we believe, who said that figures won't lie but liars will figure. If we were to get into the prognosticating game, like some of our Republican friends who are claiming a great victory for Mr. Morrow and the rest of the Republican ticket, we'd certainly take into consideration the following figures, offhand vote polled in the recent primary election:

In the Democratic Governor's race, Stanley received 107,585 votes, McChesney, 69,22, McDermott, 25,918, and Bosworth, 3,146, making a total of 206,371.

In the Republican contest, Morrow received 68,045 and McLaughlin 8,837, making a total of 77,482.

There were 128,889 more Democrats, according to the above figures, participating in the primary than Republicans.

We do not predict a majority in November for Mr. Stanley, of over 100,000, but there must be some significance in such a wide difference in the voting strength of the two parties.—Estill Tribune.

ELECTION COMMISSIONERS

Messrs. C. C. McDonald, Democrat and H. W. Loebridge, Republican, have been named as Election Commissioners for the ensuing year. Both are excellent gentlemen and will make acceptable officers. They, with Sheriff H. F. Howell, who, by virtue of his office, is chairman, will constitute the Montgomery County Board of Election Commissioners.

CAMARGO HAS BIG SCHOOL

Montgomery county's first consolidated school, located at Camargo, opened Monday with an enrollment of seventy pupils. Temporarily and until the completion of the new handsome building now being erected, the old building will be occupied. A large number of interested persons gathered at the building and much enthusiasm was shown in the new venture. An active Mothers' Club was formed for the purpose of co-operating and aiding the school in every possible way.

As our readers know, the consolidation of inferior rural schools into one commodious school centrally located and capably taught, is one of the reforms the Advocate has long fought for and we confidently look for big things from the Camargo Consolidated School.

PROF. BRUCE REYNOLDS

We have been advised by the management of The Paramount Theatre that they have signed a contract with Prof. Bruce Reynolds, the celebrated violinist, of Lexington, for the entire Fall and Winter season. Prof. Reynolds has been playing at The Paramount for several weeks and his exquisite playing has added a great deal to the popularity of this splendid show house. The news that Prof. Reynolds will remain here will be received with a great deal of pleasure by the theatre-going public.

Midway was visited by a $100,000 fire early Sunday morning, the main business section of the little city being destroyed.

Among those who suffered from the fire was Mr. L. F. Payne, formerly of this city, and who has many friends here who will regret to learn of his loss. It is understood that work will start at once reconstructing a number of the buildings.

HIS VISIT

Representative of South African Government is pleased with His Reception.

Mr. Editor:

I have made such a host of excellent friends in "Old Kentucky" that I am obliged to beg for a space in your widely read paper in order to express to them, one and all, my most heartfelt appreciation and esteem for their bonafide hospitality and friendliness.

He has for the last three years mainly through contact with the people.

Thanking you very much for the space given me, I am, Mr. Editor,

Yours very sincerely,
J. van der Heyde Schreder.
Dr. Schreder is one of several students sent by the Government of the Union of South Africa to foreign countries to study agriculture in all its phases.

He has for the last three years given his best attention to live stock wherever they were worth studying. Dr. Schreder, having seen and studied the best of the world, is naturally very modest in expressing his views on our stock, but whatever he says is in superlative terms. We are pleased that he likes Kentucky and that we could show him hospitality. Dr. Schreder is a brilliant student, high-toned gentleman and a credit to his nation and government. We wish him every success in life.

SIXTH INSTALLMENT

SYNOPSIS.

Professor Stillitter, psychologist, and Gordon Barclay, millionaire, plan to preach to the world the gospel of efficiency through a young and beautiful woman who will be their side and a heaven-sent messenger. They kidnap the orphaned little Amesbury girl, playmate of Tommy Steele, and conceal her in a cavern, in care of a woman, to be molded to their plan as she grows up. Fifteen years elapse. Tommy is adopted by Barclay and becomes a successful man. On a hunting trip discovers Celestia. Stillitter takes Celestia to New York. Tommy follows, she gets away from both of them, and her real work begins.

CHAPTER XVII.

"Don't be afraid," said Celestia calmly. "I won't hurt you."

And that was almost the last thing that Freddie's vaguely working mind expected her to say. "She," he thought, "ought to be afraid of me. I am a man; she is a girl. I have a club; she hasn't. I am to take her to Sweetzer, dead or alive. I can crack her head like an egg. So why does she tell me not to be afraid? Why does she say she won't hurt me? Maybe she's got a gun. Maybe she knows something."

All the while her magnificent, compassionate eyes held him spellbound. He heard something fall heavily to the floor. He looked to see what it was. It was his club. He tried to pick it up, but seemed to lack the necessary muscular control.

"What's your name?" asked Celestia.

"Freddie Douglas."

"Do you belong in this house?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Then we must be friends, because I belong here, too."

"You going to live with us?"

Celestia nodded.

"Honor bright," smiled Celestia.

"Honor bright?" asked Freddie suspiciously.

It was then no longer necessary for Freddie to take sudden action. If Celestia was going to live on in the same house it would be a simple matter at some more propitious moment (when she wasn't looking at a fellow, for instance) to turn her over to Sweetzer.

Nevertheless, it seemed to Freddie that the matter required thought, and he slunk off to think. It required time and luck. He had less good luck at thinking than at anything else.

His proposition was this: Sweetzer had paid a thousand dollars for Celestia and had lost her. He had said to Freddie in effect, "Get her back. There's money in it." How much money was there in it? Suppose there was so much, how could Freddie turn it into more? Probably Mrs. Baxter would also pay money to know what had become of Celestia. Freddie knew that his father needed more money to pay the rent, and the bright spots in his brain began to work.

First he went to Sweetzer.

"Well," said Sweetzer.

"I shouldn't wonder," said Freddie. "If I was going to find her. I got a clue."

"Good."

"How much money is there in it?"

"A dollar."

Freddie simply smiled a sad little smile, turned on his heel and started to walk away.

"Hold on, Freddie; I was kiddin' you."

"You mustn't kid me. It drives me crazy. I shouldn't wonder if I could find her for"—his lips trembled at their own audacity—"fifty."

Sweetzer's face did not even show surprise.

"You take me where she is," he said, "and I'll go you the fifty."

A dull spot on Freddie's brain tried to make him say "All right, come along," but a bright spot suddenly intervened and made him say instead: "All right, I find her sure."

Next Freddie went to Mrs. Baxter's home. A taxicab was drawn up at the curb and the front door was ajar. Freddie simply walked into the house. There were voices in the front parlor. Freddie simply stepped to the portieres, which served the front parlor as a door, and stood, listening.

"So help me God, I have told the truth!" Mrs. Baxter was saying, and Freddie judged she was crying.

"So help me Gawd—Mister—Mister—what did you say your name was?"

"Barclay."

"Mr. Barclay, I wouldn't worry if I was you. She came to no harm with me, and I'm as bad as they make 'em."

"Look here," said Tommy. "What would you do in my place?"

"I'd offer big money for news of her. Money acts quicker than lightning."

"Why," said Tommy, "I'd give a thousand dollars just to know that she was safe."

Freddie, the ferret, stepped into the room from between the portieres.

"She's safe!" he said, with fine dramatic instinct.

"Safe!" cried Tommy. "Where is she? You've seen her? Who is this young man?"

"He's called Freddie the Ferret," said Mrs. Baxter, "because he often finds things that other people can't find with good people and wouldn't go with Tommy he was contented to let matters rest where they were.

Celestia's real work had begun. Often upon the lips of the elder Douglas, and always in his heart, was the belief that Celestia was divinely inspired and of divine origin.

Mrs. Douglas and Nelly also believed that Celestia had come from heaven. Her effect upon these simple-minded folk was extraordinary. She looked no longer like a Greek goddess, but like a simple working girl. And yet she remained magically lovely to look at and commanding.

Stillitter, after ten minutes' talk with Mr. and Mrs. Douglas (during a short absence of Celestia), concluded that she could not be in better hands. Indeed, she had been in a similar family that he had intended to place her.

"She says," said Douglas, "that every man jack of us ought to have a real share in the country. That we must treat misery and poverty not as necessary evils, but as epidemics, and stamp 'em out. And I tell you the man who runs that platform will get a heap o' votes in this district. Nobody ever tries to argue with her. You just listen and believe."

Stillitter reported to Barclay and the other members of the triumvirate. And those who had begun to lose faith in Celestia once more became enthusiastic.

"Don't hurry her any," said Barclay. "Let her doctrines spread from the house she's living in, slowly and naturally, until she has a real following. Then when we do begin to advertise her it will be more effective and cheaper."

Tommy paced the narrow sidewalk like a sentinel on duty.

A couple of young men entered the building. They passed under a sign which said: "Positively No Smoking." And Tommy was annoyed to observe that both were smoking cigarettes. One threw aside his cigarette, still lighted, the other kept on smoking, and they passed out of sight up the stairs.

"I'll report those two cubes to the manager," he said. "And if he doesn't seem properly interested I'll make things hot for them."

So Tommy entered the premises of the Octagon Shirt company and began to look for the manager. Some people said he was in such and such a place, and others didn't know. But a girl who seemed to be dying of consumption said that Mr. Grady had just stopped up to the fifth floor, where the sewing machines were, with a young lady.

At once Tommy pictured this Grady as greasy and haledommed and hated him. Also, so strong was his imagination, he imagined that he smelt smoke.

At the opposite end of a long dark room Celestia's lovely earnest face seemed to shine like a light. She was speaking very softly and gently, but every word was distinctly audible even to the farthest pair of ears. It seemed to Tommy that the room contained hundreds of girls and hundreds of sewing machines. As a matter of fact there were almost a hundred of each.

Near Celestia stood a dark, stoutish man with a pencil over one ear.

"Grady," thought Tommy, and hated him less, for although the man was greasy and did wear something that looked like a diamond in his necklace, there was a kind of reverent expression upon his coarse hard face.

Celestia was just finishing when Tommy entered. She finished, and there was no sound whatever in the room. Then one girl left her place and went slowly toward her; others followed until as many as could be were crowded closely about Celestia and Grady.

As for the man Grady, she had looked into his eyes just once, and he, too, believed. But dark thoughts tormented him. There were upon his conscience for one had just been born in him, many sins of hard-heartedness, brutality and work. In that building there was not one girl whose life he might not have lightened, a little if it had pleased him. It had pleased him to do the reverse. Suddenly he felt moved to take the whole world into his confidence, and to promise amends to those whom he had injured.

"Grady," he said, in a loud, strong voice. "Just one or two words, please. I don't know what the talk we've been listening to has done to you. But it got me. I charged this—I don't know whether to say Lady or whether to say Angel—big price for the privilege of speaking to you for ten minutes. I want to say, first of all, that it won't cost her a cent. And if she needs money to carry on her good work in this world she can have my pile. But that's not all I've got to say. Be a little patient. Don't crowd her so. If I'm any judge of faces she won't go without letting the last least one of you touch her hand. Girls, I've been a slave-driver so long that I got hardened to the work. If there was ever any kindness in me it seemed to me I had to stamp it out to get results. I've driven you and driven you till you can't call your souls your own. I might have been different and got the work done just the same. But I wasn't. Well, I'm going to be. She said things would get better some time. They're better right this minute. Can't you feel that I'm sorry for the things I've said to you and done to you? I tell you I'm ashamed. I don't know what keeps me from sinking down through the floor. The hardest things I've got to say comes next. Some of you girls know me for a hard, cold-hearted man. Is there any girl here who can say worse than that of me?"

He paused as if waiting for a reply. Then he went on.

"Well there is one girl here who could say worse than that of me if she would. But she won't. She won't squeal. So I'll have to do the squealing. Molly Bryan! Step forward, please, Molly Bryan. I've something to say to you that I want all your friends and well-wishers to hear."

Very slowly a slender girl with tragic haunted dark eyes came forward.

"Stand alongside of me Molly, and turn so a everybody can see you. Some of you," he went on, "have known

"I'm Afraid of Only One Thing," Said Stillitter. "She is Interested in That Boy of Yours."

Tommy paced the narrow sidewalk like a sentinel on duty.

through in many places, so that some of the last girls to pass through the door to safety went with burned feet.

"Hurry, Celestia," called Tommy. "We can go now."

She did not answer.

He saw her at a window struggling to open it.

"This way, Celestia! For God's sake, don't jump!"

And he ran to her across the smoking and burning floor. As he reached her a portion of the floor over which he had just passed fell in with a crackling, crashing sound, and through the aperture flame and smoke roared upward as from the crater of a volcano.

Celestia had not succeeded yet in opening the window. As Tommy reached her she staggered and fell into his arms.

He turned with her toward the door, and groaned like a thing that had been hurt to death. Escape that way looked impossible.

Supporting Celestia with one arm he succeeded in opening the window. The crowd in the street below saw them, and a kind of groaning and lamentation arose.

Celestia began to revive.

Tommy had turned his back to the window. Not until the last moment would he let her jump, and then only to escape a more shocking death. Meanwhile his heart beat strongly, and he pressed her closer to his breast as if he thought as they had at best but a few minutes to live he must make her understand how much he loved her.

"Oh," he thought, "if only she could love me, could let me know she loved me before the end."

It seemed to him that he couldn't know that, that he mustn't die without her knowing that.

Then a sudden and more practical thought came into his head. If he was to die, he must die trying to save her. Then she would understand. He looked about him wildly, and his eyes fell upon a great roll of black and white-striped material for making shirts. Leaving Celestia leaning against the wall near the open window, he made a dash for the shirting, and unrolled it, dashing over it the contents of a number of fire buckets that still contained water.

It was his notion to wrap Celestia in the wet stuff, to take her in his arms, and carry her safe to the door, and to that safety which still seemed to exist beyond.

By some strange freak of the fire there was still quite a large area of flooring surrounding Celestia, yet unburned. But between that and the door, to make the crossing, seemed to offer but one chance in a hundred. The one who was carried might live to tell the tale. The one who did the carrying could hardly hope for so much. He would be so badly burned that, although he might be alive when he reached the street, he would not live long thereafter.

It takes many words often to tell of what happens in a few instants of time. From the first cry of fire to the time when Tommy had wrapped Celestia in the wet shirting, and was preparing, you may say, to wade through hell for her, was only a few minutes.

The last girls to leave the sewing machine room had only just reached the street.

"Now for it," thought Tommy, and to Celestia he shouted (he had to shout to make himself heard):

"Don't be afraid, dear. I'm going to get you out of this."

And he gathered her strongly in his arms, pictured out, with swift eyes, what appeared to be the best route through the flames, drew one great,

THE SAME EVERYWHERE

"Every week the paper—this paper or any other—has typographical errors; and there is always someone ready to laugh mirthlessly over it and hold the paper up to scorn and say a blacksmith could do a better job with both hands tied, and proceed to bawl out the editor publicly. And the editor, being meek in spirit and lowly, grins a sun-grin as if he liked it, because he knows the utter futility of explaining. Then he goes back to the shop and hites a nail in two or eats a wooly worm to relieve his feelings; and finally wonders how his tormentors would feel, should he turn critic and point out the typographical errors, so to speak, in the make-up of the hilarious ones. For instance: Hon. Jehu Junkins shaves himself, and last Sunday appeared at church with a patch of unshaven whiskers under the angle of his jaw the size of a grown man's thumb; Sis Stiggins had her hat on crooked and the shoestring on her switch showed through what little real hair she has left. The underskirt of the belle of the village hung on one side a full inch below the bottom of her dress; Amri Toots one of our best known city gents, walked down the aisle with a long raveling hanging to his coat tail; old Ebenezer Stone had blacked the front compartment of his shoes until he could see his reflection in them, while his shoe heels had not had a treatment since he bought them last summer a year ago; and they wore traces and the odor of a barnyard; Billy B. Damm, who ordinarily doesn't give three whoops for anything and doesn't care who knows it, blushed a rosy red when, walking with his best girl, he produced a washrag from his pocket instead of his handkerchief; Miss Peachie Peacherino, who is risin' thirty-five and near-sighted, wafted a kiss to a traveling man getting on the train under the impression that it was her brother who departed from our midst on the same common carrier. As the poet remarks, we are all poor critters and prone to errors of make-up even as the sparks fly upward; and all good and true editors, instead of impaling the kit and bundle on his harpoon to get good and even once for all, will again next week smile his feeble sun-grin when he is publicly roasted and let it go at that. An editor hasn't much sense anyway. That's why he is an editor.

Give the young and struggling a word of encouragement now and then. You would not leave those plants in your window boxes without water nor refuse to open the shutters that the sunlight may fall upon them, but you would leave some human flower to suffer from want of appreciation or the sunlight of encouragement.

GERMANY REGRETS LOSS OF AMERICAN LIFE

Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, has communicated to the State Department instructions from his government expressing regret and sympathy "if Americans lost their lives in the sinking of the liner Arabic," and asking the United States to delay taking a definite stand in regard to the affair until Germany could be heard from.

This was the first word from an official German source concerning the Arabic, on which two Americans perished. Its receipt was followed by an evident relaxation of the tension which had been growing here as days passed with no indication of a desire on Germany's part to disclaim any intention of committing an act "deliberately unfriendly" toward the United States.

No attempt was made, either at the State Department or the White House, to interpret the ambassador's communication. Officials merely said that, of course the American Government would await the German explanation of the action of the submarine commander in sinking the liner.

Count Bernstorff telephoned the State Department from New York the text of his instructions from Berlin. It follows:

"So far no official information available concerning the sinking of the Arabic. The German government trusts that the American government will not take a definite stand at hearing only the report of one side, which, in the opinion of the Imperial government, cannot correspond with the facts, but that a chance will be given to Germany to be heard equally."

"Although the Imperial government does not doubt the good faith of the witnesses whose statements are reported by the newspapers in Europe, it should be borne in mind that these statements are naturally made under excitement, which might easily produce a wrong impression. If Americans should have actually lost their lives this would naturally be contrary to our instructions. The German government would deeply regret the fact and begs to tender sincerest sympathy of the American government."

Secretary Lansing indicated he did not intend to reply to the ambassador's message at this time. He agreed to its publication with the statement that he had no comment to make.

Particular attention was attracted by the assertion in the German communication that, in the opinion of the Imperial government, the accounts of the sinking of the Arabic which have come from England could not correspond with the facts.

These accounts, in affidavits by the Captain of the ship and American survivors, have agreed that the Arabic, an unarmed steamer passenger vessel, bound for the United States, with no contraband in her cargo, was torpedoed without warning by a submarine.

It may be a week or more before Germany is heard from further. The report of the submarine commander is awaited in Berlin, and it is known that sometimes ten days or more elapse before the under-water boats return to their bases and communicate with the Admiralty.

BREAK OUT OF THE COOP

"I don't get enough exercise, I feel like a hen shut up in a coop," remarked a local citizen to us a few days ago.

And without wonder.

He is closeted in his business house all day, and at night he is at home with his family.

Sunday he goes to church in the morning, and in the afternoon he usually entertains callers at his home.

He has no time for exercise and he has no recreation.

He is just about like the hen in the coop. He moves around in a restricted space and continually fans a desire for freedom that is never gratified.

His mind is overworked and his muscles are underworked. There is no happy medium, and he is paying the price.

Now here's your remedy, brother, and with no price attached.

You have ten or twenty good friends who are probably situated much as you are.

Send those friends a little note and ask them to meet with you some evening. Then propose to them that you all take a long walk the following Sunday afternoon, "just for exercise."

It will be something out of the ordinary grind and will appeal to them. They will go.

You should walk two abreast and keep in step, every foot coming down at the same instant. Let the leaders set the pace, and let each man see that his left foot touches the ground at the same time of the left foot of the man in front. That is to prevent one man coming down with his left foot at the same time another does with his right, which is contrary to all pedestrian rules.

Throw out your chest to an unnatural position, straighten your shoulders, raise your head, avoid all stiffness, and walk briskly with a free and easy swing.

It will brace you up, aid your crippled digestion, assist your sluggish circulation of blood, put a sparkle in your eye, and make a new man of you all around.

That steady tramp, tramp, will go right into your blood and set you on fire.

You will learn how to walk with dignity and grace, and in time will carry the same alert, upright and energetic movements into your daily life.

It will be better than medicine and cheaper than the doctor, a stimulant and a tonic for both mind and body.

Break out of the coop, brother, break out of the coop!

J. F. Cross caused a flutter of excitement in our midst one day this week by galloping up in front of the postoffice and announcing that he had just met a green colored mule down the road. While Mr. Cross is regarded as a truthful church member, the crowd could scarcely believe their ears, and a delegation started out to view the mule with their own eyes. They looked up and down the road for several miles, and when they got back to the postoffice they found that Mr. Cross had looked at an ordinary sorrel mule through green spectacles.

The conversation at the postoffice the other night drifted from the Galveston flood down nearer to home, and the subject of buzzards was dwelt upon at length by Dr. Joe Pace and others. Farmer Al Williams recalled that he had seen probably the biggest and oldest one on record. He said this one roosted over in an old barn in the Goose Aakle neighborhood, and was a hundred and twenty years old. It measured more than fifty feet from tip to tip, and many a time he says he has seen it swoop down and take a cow right out of the pasture in its claws, and feed it to the young ones.

PAWNS IN THE GAME

A New York financier estimates the cost of the war is now around $50,000,000 per day and the amount spent thus far is estimated to have been about $15,500,000,000. The same authority says the wealth of the United States has been computed to be something near $180,000,000,000. The first year of the war cost about one-twelfth of this amount. At this rate of destruction a sum equal to the total wealth of the United States would be wiped out in twelve years. This money cost of a year's war does not include the destruction of cities, the devastation of countries, the wholesale looting of personal property or the unestimable loss of commerce. These nations at war have doubled their national debts, and the labor of unborn generations has been mortgaged to the financiers of the world. Wealth producers must pay the price. Those who dig and delve and plow and sow are the pawns in this game of war. Almost from the dawn of time, these have been the packbearers, the doormats, the shavelings and the despised of monarchs and their favorites. They sow; they never reap. Those who do the least receive the most. If this war of wars should bring about disarmament of the nations of the world, it would assure a peace of a thousand years. But will it? Human nature never changes. Human greed is as strong today as it was thousands of years before the coming of the Nazarine with His gospel of peace and love. Men of all civilized nations pride of the Golden Rule, but it is a lip service for the most part. The dollar of commerce is the golden rule and how to get it is the chief aim of man. This is a blunt way of putting it, but it is the truth. Socialists are dreamers, men say, but they are for the disarmament of all nations and of peace among men. The Nazarene preached the same gospel and He was crucified. Two thousand years after His passing nations of men who call Him their Savior are as bloodthirsty in their treatment of their foeman as the savage Sioux of the West in the dark days of American pioneer life on the borderlands.—Exchange.

Very few buyers have the time to look all over town before making their purchases. Life is too short for that.

They must have the goods, and without unnecessary loss of time in making their selections, and it is but natural that they should turn to the advertising pages of the local paper for such advance information as may be obtained before starting out on their quest.

Thus it is that the merchant who advertises his wares, and keeps his best offering in the public eye has advantage of the man who never advertises and draws business to his store which otherwise might drift into other places.

It is good for the merchant and it is good for the buyer, for it enables the merchant to dispose of his goods at a reasonable profit and enables the buyer to make the purchases he desires to best advantage without loss of time.

And if there is a special bargain offered it enables the buyer to take advantage of the opportunity instead of going to some other place where a higher price would prevail. Advertising has been reduced to a science, and those who benefit from it are not found only in the camp of the advertiser. The buyer shares equally in the benefits through the saving of time and the securing of the articles he desires at minimum prices.

Keep your eye on the advertising pages of this paper, for they will contain many attractive offerings from week to week.

Success comes to those who seek it and economical buying is one of the surest means to that end.

SHOPPER'S BEST FRIEND IS LOCAL NEWSPAPER

The best friend of the careful buyer is the advertisement in the local paper.

It is the arrow that points the way.

It is a foregone conclusion that when a merchant goes to the expense of advertising certain goods that those goods are well worth the price and will stand up under the most rigid inspection. If it were otherwise the merchant would hardly be calling attention to them. He would simply resort to the shady trick of "working them off" on some unsuspecting dupe.

Very few buyers have the time to look all over town before making their purchases. Life is too short for that.

They must have the goods, and without unnecessary loss of time in making their selections, and it is but natural that they should turn to the advertising pages of the local paper for such advance information as may be obtained before starting out on their quest.

Thus it is that the merchant who advertises his wares, and keeps his best offering in the public eye has advantage of the man who never advertises and draws business to his store which otherwise might drift into other places.

It is good for the merchant and it is good for the buyer, for it enables the merchant to dispose of his goods at a reasonable profit and enables the buyer to make the purchases he desires to best advantage without loss of time.

And if there is a special bargain offered it enables the buyer to take advantage of the opportunity instead of going to some other place where a higher price would prevail. Advertising has been reduced to a science, and those who benefit from it are not found only in the camp of the advertiser. The buyer shares equally in the benefits through the saving of time and the securing of the articles he desires at minimum prices.

Keep your eye on the advertising pages of this paper, for they will contain many attractive offerings from week to week.

Success comes to those who seek it and economical buying is one of the surest means to that end.

We haven't heard of a single Democrat in Trigg county who is not for the entire ticket in November, and we don't believe there will be a one, for there certainly isn't any reason for them not being for it.—Caldiz Record.

While human nature remains what it is, a word of appreciation will never be lost on old or young and is one of the best paying investments which can be made. Some say, "I don't care whether they like it or not," but that is all nonsense for man, woman or child; we every one of us feel our heart grow warm under merited praise, and if we get a little more of it than we deserve, which rarely happens in this world, we try to deserve more next time.

ZACK CONNER

A DANGER

A danger that confronts the United States is that the force of public opinion aroused by a jingo press of no judgment may carry the Administration from its safe base and precipitate war with Germany. With a man of the iron nerve and courage of Woodrow Wilson in command the danger is remote, it is true, but it is a danger just the same. This country is not prepared for war. It will require several years to bring the country on a basis in any degree equal to that of European countries now fighting. It is perhaps true that Germany has a system of spies covering the United States who are better acquainted with the country's war footing than are the citizens of the country themselves. Perhaps it is true also that there are over two million German reservists in this country who could be relied on to take up the cause of the Fatherland in the event of a rupture. Germany is likewise buying and storing ammunition and other war supplies here, perhaps to use against us. All this may be true and it counts. It may be well for citizens to hie themselves to camps like that at Plattsburgh, N. Y., and enter upon military training. It will at least be good for the tired business man's health.

BUT—all of this is well-known to the authorities at Washington, better known than it is to the excited newspaper writers. Even more is known to President Wilson and his advisers. As a matter of fact, they have the WHOLE SITUATION before them and know exactly what they are doing and what the country ought to do. The vast majority of our people have confidence in the Administration, and believe it should be left unhampered to work out its delicate problems. If left alone there can be no doubt of a correct solution of every difficulty. So far as we are concerned, therefore, nobody can scare us or work up a war frenzy in this neighborhood until Woodrow Wilson gives notice that there are breakers ahead. Until then, war editors and correspondents and Theodore Roosevelt and Lexington Herald may howl their heads off, but sweet slumber these delightful August evenings shall go undisturbed.—Cynthia Democrat.

RUTH LAW LAWLESS SKIMMER OF THE SKY

With George Mayland, the "Miraculous Human Fly"

RUTH LAW.

RUTH LAW is "such a little queen," but she makes her big brothers of the wide blue sky sit up in their mono and biplanes and take notice when she sails into the far reaches of the empyrean and does stunts that even a bird would not dream of doing. And yet she has been flying only two years, is one of only two women fliers in the country and is still in her teens. She is just an ambitious, daring, feminine little slip who has become ensnared of aerial work, does not know the meaning of fear and who, while modestly decrying what is known as "insane" or sensational flying and who preaches the beauty and commendability of scientific flying, yet skims and darts and spirals and dives and drives through the air in such dizzy fashion that her every appearance is the supreme sensation of the day.

Daredevilry evidently runs in the Law family, for Ruth is a sister to the famous Rodman Law, champion air man, high diver and motion picture sensationalist, whose doulas have furnished the press with special stories galore. Not satisfied with the achievements she accomplishes alone, Ruth has secured another intrepid soul in George Mayland, a parachute jumper, who goes up for 2,000 feet or over in the "Air Queen's" machine, creeps out on the crossed wires under the plane, cuts loose his chute from the body of the car and, with the airship going sixty or seventy miles an hour, drops 500 feet before he dares let his frail support umbrella open and carry him to the earth 1,500 feet.

Rushing at a rate too terrific for even an express train to rival, the effect of this sudden lightening of the madly careening sirship, outlined like a shooting star against the far sky, is absolutely awesome, and spectators momentarily lose breath and speech until the little flier and the big car right themselves and triumphantly continue their journey—for that time at least.

Going over Niagara falls in a barrel or smoking in a gunpowder factory is inconsequential compared with this feat, which sends shivers up the spine at the mere description and which is in reality one of the most spectacular, sensational, electrifying and tremendously thrilling ever witnessed and which no other flier is duplicating or attempting.

Every day Ruth Law and her neeve thugling turn will be the supreme attraction at the Kentucky State Fair, and on two afternoons of the week

George Mayland will make his death-defying dive.

BANNER TOBACCO YEAR

Early Crops Insure Great Show For Thirteenth Annual Kentucky State Fair

FOR the first time in the past several years conditions are entirely favorable for tobacco growers, and the crop for 1915 will be an unusually early one. In view of this fact it is more than probable that the tobacco exhibit at the Kentucky State Fair this year will be an interesting and extensive one, with growers of every county competing for the interesting premiums offered. E. S. Rees, superintendent of the department, is making an appeal to growers throughout the state to do their sections proud this season by entering the banner leafage of their crops, and the rivalry will be keen.

Entries for the tobacco department will close Sept. 8, and in the interim application blanks and further information may be had from Evan S. Rees, superintendent, Springfield, Ky., or J. L. Dent, secretary, Kentucky State Fair, Louisville, Ky.

PRECAUTIONARY MEASURES IN VACCINATING HOGS

When hogs or pigs are heavily infested with worms, vaccination may result in considerable loss. Hogs that are excessively fat are not as good risks for vaccination as animals in medium condition. Farmers must provide proper care of hogs before and after treatment to reduce the risk to a minimum. Many of the undesirable results following vaccination are due to the condition of the hogs, or to the surroundings under which they are kept. These factors are in a majority of instances under the control of the owner.

The following points in hog management should be carefully considered:

1. Ascertain beyond a doubt whether or not cholera is present in the herd.

2. Animals stand the excitement and shock of vaccination better if the intestinal tract is empty; if free from parasites; if in medium flesh; if kept cool during the operation and confined in a clean, disinfected stall, bedded with straw while awaiting the injection of serum.

3. The point of inoculation must be thoroughly cleaned and disinfected. The animals must not be allowed access to dirty, filthy wallows before or after treatment. It is impossible to clean a dirty hog with a small amount of antiseptic so that serum can be injected with any degree of cleanliness. Abscesses are most often the results of the filthiness of the hogs and not to any fault of the operator who employs proper precautions with his syringe and serum.

4. There must be a clean, dust-free enclosure for the hogs at the time of inoculation.

5. Following vaccination hogs must be kept in clean quarters for at least two days. Dirty wallows should be avoided. A good plan is to keep hogs in a well bedded stable. The feed should be laxative in nature. Losses sometimes follow vaccination in the winter months because animals are placed in damp, filthy quarters.

6. Great care is employed in preparing pure, potent serum. There is little risk in injecting good serum into hogs that are properly prepared for the operation and properly cared for following it.

In summing up the factors which contribute to irregularities, it has been observed that in a great many herds the owner is negligent in providing the care necessary before and after treatment, especially those essentials herein mentioned.

STATE-WIDE IN LINE

We are for Stanley, teeth and toe nail, now. We are no less for State-wide than before the primary, but we are going to wait until another opportunity to fight for it, and then we will be in the game stronger than ever. We fought for the County Unit for more than a dozen years and we can fight that long or longer for State-wide. There is a principle involved as eternal as the hills and as true as gospel and this question will be finally settled by the popular vote of the people in favor of closing the saloons in Kentucky. Let the question rest and elect the Democratic ticket for we are no worse beat than we suffered many times while we were trying to get County Unit. We should stand by the Democratic party because that party has given us all the temperance legislation we have and will give us all we ask when we carry on the campaign sufficiently long to educate the masses.—Smithland Enterprise.

Stoops.

(By B. M. Goodan)

Farmers are making slow progress housing tobacco.

Sherman Hamilton is at home from the Good Samaritan Hospital. He is improving nicely.

Tom Stanfield moved last week to near Moorefield.

The continuous bad weather is badly damaging ripe tobacco as farmers cannot house it to any advantage.

Born, August 25th, to Albert Varris and wife, a daughter.

John J. Coyle and family, of near Owingsville, visited relatives near here last week.

Mrs. Lucy Smathers and Mrs. Lidia Mark, who recently moved to Lexington, are badly missed from their places at Springfield church.

Several from this section went to Owingsville Saturday to attend the school rally.

A good size crowd heard Dr.

Guerrant preach at Springfield Sunday, though the weather continued very threatening.

Thus, H. Carr, wife and little daughter, Mabel, of Clark county, were visitors here Sunday.

Lientrell Warner and wife went Saturday to visit relatives at Salt Lick.

A missionary, whose name we did not learn, recently returned from Africa, will preach at Springfield Sunday morning.

The Stoops and Gudgell Hill ball teams played a "sonking game" here Sunday afternoon. The rain "fell gently" during the entire game. Gudgell Hill proved to be the best mud players and nosed out Stoops by a 10 to 9 score. The way the base runners flew up and bumped the ground, ran, crawled, rolled over and scouted proved great amusement for the few spectators who were sheltered under some friendly trees.

The scholars of Miss Stellin Copher's school will give a pie supper Saturday night, September 4.

Levee.

Crops look fairly well in this section. Tobacco housing is now in progress and there is plenty of work if the "onery" boys will work.

L. B. Hadden purchased 5 nice steers from J. R. Crow at 7 cents per pound also bought several more at same price.

J. L. Faulkner bought of Menefee county people several cattle at a private price, also sold to them a nice bull calf for $45.

V. R. Faulkner sold to B. W. Hall a nice suckling bull calf for $50.

Mrs. Wm. Turley remains about the same at the time of this writing.

Harve Knox, our popular mail carrier is off on his vacation, while Mr. Guy See performs his duties.

Mr. Perry Baker returned from R. L. Tipton's Saturday night. We all welcome Perry home.

Mr. Roger Baker visited friends and relatives in Clark county last week.

A closely contested game of ball Sunday between Levee and the High Pockets, was called in the eighth inning on account of rain. The batteries for Levee were Barnard and McDonald; for High Pockets, Carpenter and Morton. The game was pitched mostly by Knox with his famous snake ball. The Levee had not much of a chance but they did the best they could with Mr. Maples as our honorable umpire. The score was 22 to 4 in favor of Levee.

PREWITT REUNION

The Prewitt reunion, an event in which the descendants of many of the most prominent families of this section of the State participate, was held last Thursday. More than one hundred and forty persons were in attendance and the event was one of the most enjoyable and noteworthy since the custom has been established. The members of these families were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Nat B. Young, Mr. and Mrs. Prewitt Young and Miss Murry Ann Young, at "Walnut Grove," a beautiful locality on the estate situated on the Maysville pike, near Mt. Sterling. The day was ideal for such an occasion and nothing happened to mar the pleasure of the gathering.

This annual event attracts the members of the families from all sections, and all through the day scores thronged the beautiful woods. The occasion was one long to be remembered.

Under the spreading braches of the walnut and sugar trees in the grove, a delicious luncheon was served which consisted of all the delicacies of the season. This beautiful repast was heartily enjoyed. While the older members of the jolly party mingled with each other recounting the pleasant recollections of the reunions of the past the young folks spent several happy hours in playing interesting games.

In addition to the large number of the members of the various families, there were several visitors, friends of the Prewitts, who had been extended invitations to attend the gathering. Those who were in attendance were as follows.

Descendants of James Prewitt and Keziah French, (first marriage), James C. Prewitt and son, Hiram, Wallace and Pendleton Taylor.

Hundreds of fat cattle were shipped away from this county last week, C. C. McDonald sending several carloads, while Henry S. Caywood made a shipment of twelve ears. Mr. Caywood bought 175 head of fine export cattle from R. C. Gatewood that averaged 1,428 pounds, and which brought the nice sum of 8½ cents a pound. The largest portion of the fat cattle have been sold, but a great many of them will not go until in September and October.
